

Global Maritime Law Overview

Global Maritime Law (Admiralty Law) is a body of laws that govern nautical issues and private maritime disputes.

It consists of both domestic law on maritime activities, and private international law governing the relationships between private parties operating or using ocean-going ships.

One of the key concepts is the 'General Average', which requires that if cargo is jettisoned in a voluntary sacrifice to save the ship, all parties to the sea venture must proportionally share the loss.

Another important convention is the SOLAS (Safety of Life at Sea) convention, which ensures maritime safety.
